Region: Rwanda Karenghe Grade 1

We already know Rwanda for its ill-famed historical events but until recently, the coffee history has also been turbulent. Forced coffee planting in the 1930s by the Belgian empire led to a high volume and low-price/low-quality trap. It has taken 80 years for that to turn around and now, Rwanda is cultivating some of the best Bourbon variety in the world. Each time I drink Rwandan coffee I am grateful for the amazing work the coffee industry has achieved by creating jobs, supporting small farmers and bringing harmony to this once broken community.

ABOUT THE FARM/ESTATE

Karenghe means 'small footprint' in Kinyarwanda the official language of Rwanda and it stands true for this cooperative of ~100 farmers who practise socially and environmentally sustainable coffee farming. I've always enjoyed Rwanda's specialty coffees and this particular harvest exemplifies the complexity and richness that Rwandan coffee farms have to offer.
